

What is claimed is:

1. An exhaust gas purifying system having a continuous regeneration diesel particulate filter installed in the exhaust passage of a diesel engine provided with a glow plug and a regeneration control means for regenerating said continuous regeneration diesel particulate filter, characterized in that said regeneration control means performs retarded injection or post-injection in the control of fuel injection into a cylinder and heating the inside of said cylinder by said glow plug for regenerating said continuous regeneration diesel particulate filter.